

Dear Sir/Madam,

About Me

I am a clinical psychologist experienced in providing workplace training and support. I entered the disability sector in 2013 and have worked with adults, adolescents and children with disabilities throughout this time. I also undertake assessments of people with disabilities and provide high quality reports. I have worked as an expert witness for the Family Court of Australia, Federal Circuit Court of Australia, Supreme Court, Mental Health Court of Queensland, Magistrates Court and parole board. My assessments are comprehensive and utilise a variety of evidence-based assessment tools and techniques. I am located in the Brisbane CBD and offer appointments, onsite, offsite and via telehealth.

Workplace Training

I run self-care training for disability support workers and assist management to support staff with mental health difficulties. My workshops are practical and fun. Participants learn how to self-test their symptoms and respond appropriately. Psychological theory is taught with fun activities, thus making complex concepts more accessible and interesting.

I run training on how to analyse and respond to challenging behaviour (e.g., violence, threats, refusal, problem sexual behaviour, false allegations, self-harm and suicide, vomiting, stealing etc), trauma, attachment, depression and anxiety, root cause analysis, and best practice assessment procedures. For complex cases I provide file reviews, assessment, and treatment implementation plans.

I am passionate about workplace training. I believe that equipping frontline workers with an evidence-based skillset reduces challenging behaviours and results in better outcomes for clients and their families. Staff also feel competent and valued, thus reducing burnout and the associated costs, such as compensation claims and turnover.

My workshops are delivered in person onsite, offsite, and via teleconferencing software. Teleconferenced workshops are interactive and use multiple technologies. These can be delivered Australia wide.

Assessments

I am skilled at undertaking diagnostic assessments (e.g., mental health, personality), cognitive assessment (e.g., IQ, learning, attention, memory), capacity assessments (e.g., administration, guardianship, power of attorney), and legal assessments (e.g., fitness to stand trial, criminal responsibility, parenting capacity).
