Dear Mr Dodger,

Your contact with Legal Aid NSW

It has come to my attention that you have been repeatedly emailing Legal Aid NSW with disturbing material.

We consider this type of behaviour to be inappropriate and it must stop. We consider it reasonable to only email Legal Aid NSW if we have asked you to provide more information about an open Legal Aid service, or if you have a new legal problem.

If you continue to send voluminous and disturbing emails or behave in any other way that my staff consider to be unreasonable, we will impose restrictions on your contact with our office. This may involve restricting your contact to

- 'Writing only' – this means that we will only accept communications from you in writing delivered by Australia Post or any other restriction that we consider to be appropriate in the circumstances.

Your NDIS and Housing Matter

Legal Aid provided you with three separate advice appointments for your NDIS and Housing matters.

For your Housing rental arrears termination matter, we advised you that while you ultimately wanted to leave the property, you could lodge an application for rent reduction and compensation as a crossclaim to potentially offset your rental arrears.

In relation to the NDIS matter, we advised that you could make a complaint to the Quality and Safeguards Commission about the provider, and that you could also make a consumer claim against the provider. However, without further evidence about the provider overcharging, we were unable to provide further assistance in this matter.

Assistance from Legal Aid

If you have a new legal problem you can either contact LawAccess on 1300 888 529 or email complaints@legalaid.nsw.gov.au to ask for assistance. Any email which contains threats of harm or other disturbing material will be filed without acknowledgment and may lead to a restriction of your contact with Legal Aid NSW.

If you have any questions about this letter, contact the Legal Aid Complaints team at the postal address below or at complaints@legalaid.nsw.gov.au.

Yours sincerely
